Other News -

Leicestershire Police recorded over 5,000 calls into their Contact Management Department for a number of key days over the Christmas and New Year period. Collectively on 24, 25, 26, 31 December and 1 January, the force received a total of 5,102 calls to 999 and 101 compared to a total of 5,120 calls to 999 and 101 for the same dates last year.

Chief Constable Simon Cole said: "New Year was still busy for us and this resulted in a huge team effort by colleagues in CMD to answer and respond to these calls and action police attendance where it was needed.

"Even in the current circumstances, a large amount of planning has gone into policing Christmas and New Year to ensure our officers and staff remain committed to providing proactive high visibility patrols and quick and effective responses to incidents throughout the force area.

"Myself, as well as Assistant Chief Constable David Sandall, worked on New Year's Eve until the early hours, and I saw first-hand how hard the teams were working across the force area on a particularly bitter night. As expected we saw fewer people on the streets and less traffic on the roads but it was still very much business as usual for us responding to incidents such as domestic assaults and road traffic collisions as well as the additional Covid related calls.

"2020 as we all know has been a challenging year but I am extremely grateful and proud to all of my officers, staff and volunteers for their continued hard work and the service they have given. I would also like to thank those people of Leicester, Leicestershire and Rutland who acted responsibly and celebrated safely this Christmas and New Year within the current government guidance."
